Pretty Peggy Marsh
Starts a New Life
With New Husband

Peggy Marsh Johnson, her son Henry Anthony Marsh, and her father Albert L. Johnson.

(Special to Gazette.)

New York—Peggy Marsh, who has been one of the most talked of young actresses on two continents because of her romantic association with the late Henry Field II, is now married. The winsome English girl married Albert L. Johnson, society man and member of a well-known New York and Cleveland family.

The wedding, which was almost an elopement, took place in Greenwich, Conn.

When the facts came out both Mr. Johnson and his wife announced the intention of legally adopting Henry Anthony Marsh, the four-year-old son of Peggy Marsh and Albert Field II. There are various reports as to Mr. Johnson's intentions concerning her plans to fight in the courts for a portion of the huge estate of Marshall Field.

Henry Field II. There are various reports as to Mr. Johnson's intentions concerning her plans to fight in the courts for a portion of the huge estate of Marshall Field.

Another is that she will continue her fight. The third report is that a settlement or agreement has been reached between Mr. and Mrs. Johnson.

Both gave their age as twenty-eight. As a matter of fact, the birthday of one occurs in April, the other in December.

Back to New York they came. A rollicking wedding, breakfast for just two. Then Mr. and Mrs. Johnson went to the Great Northern hotel.

Bride Has Appendicitis
A week ago yesterday—Wednesday—Peggy was taken suddenly ill with an acute attack of appendicitis. Specialists were called in. That night Peggy was operated on. She found her husband's hand in hers when she came out of the surgery. She smiled happily and peacefully and instantly began to recover.

When asked where they were going to live Johnson said, "Wherever Peggy wishes. I think she will choose England."

"Anyway, though, our plans are in the making. I shall go wherever Peggy wishes. I'd like to raise horses and cattle. Maybe in the Argentine. I know I am able to and I am going to support my wife and this little lad. Peggy is the boss. Though, on the question of where we shall finally settle."

To which a beautiful young woman, smiling, said, "I shall follow in the footsteps of my mother."

"I will go wherever my husband wants me to. I could be happy anywhere with him."

Adopt Little Henry
"Anyway, I am going to fight this thing out myself. I shall not inherit the principal of my father's estate. I have enough ego to assert that I can support my wife and her son through my own efforts. I ought to say 'our son' for we intend to adopt Mr. Field's son, little Henry Marsh."

"Our romance? Oh, Peggy and I met quite conventionally, at a luncheon at the Elitz. We were introduced, and, golly, when I saw her I forgot every other girl I had ever seen. Then—Well, you know how such things develop."

"I am a 'bug' on horses and cattle and I have reached a lot, but I am also a pretty good dancer."

Friends say he's the best dancer on the professional stage.

They Went to Greenwich.
The tall, blue-eyed young beauty continued:

"So we went around a good deal. I was in love with her, but I wasn't so sure of it from her side. I took a wild chance and proposed. She said yes. Oh, boy! Then Peggy and I called a taxi and started out for Greenwich."

Justice Meade took the couple to the courthouse, where the simple event occurred that changed the name and the transcontinental sadness of Peggy Marsh's career with that of Albert L. Johnson.

Both gave their age as twenty-eight. As a matter of fact, the birthday of one occurs in April, the other in December.

Back to New York they came. A rollicking wedding, breakfast for just two. Then Mr. and Mrs. Johnson went to the Great Northern hotel.

ROAD BOND ISSUE
PUZZLES OFFICIALS

Some See Need for Higher Interest Rate to Carry Out '21 Program.

Rock county must sell additional road bonds in order that the 100 mile program of concrete roads be carried through. On the sale of the remaining amount of the $1,500,000 issue depends whether the Janesville-Edgerton road will be built to Indian Ford this summer and plans made for its extension to Edgerton.

County Treasurer Arthur M. Church today stated that 30% of the $500 bonds had been disposed of, leaving $1,325,000 still to be sold. This amount, it is claimed, would take care of the county's share to complete the Edgerton road, and build the Beloit-Clinton, Janesville-Manover-Brothhead and Janesville-Delaware roads in event the state and federal governments still continue their policy of extending liberal financial aid in building permanent highways on trunk lines.

Interest Is Low
The road bonds have no great sale because of the low rate of interest, 9 per cent, and that they are in denominations of $500. There is no safer investment. The market is flooded with a higher rate of interest at the present time. When the county passed the $1,500,000 bond issue for good roads, the state law fixed the interest at a maximum of 8 per cent and declared that the bonds must be sold at par value.

May Change Law
To accomplish the sale, the county may urge changes in the state road laws so as to either offer a premium on a higher rate of interest. Other county officials, including County Clerk Howard W. Lee, express a confidence that the county will be able to raise sufficient money to carry on the Edgerton road this spring. Another year, they say, and the finances of the county will be more ample and the bonds can be sold at the present interest.

"Rock county could always raise money enough to carry on her work," said the county clerk.

Costs Are Lower
According to Highway Commissioner Moore, the present road construction costs allow an estimate of from $25,000 to $30,000 a mile for concrete highways. Once the material and labor costs become settled, it is believed that road costs will be closer to the $25,000 mark than the higher estimate.

There is about seven more miles of the Edgerton road to be built and the cost is expected to be around the $200,000 mark. The county would receive more than one-third of this amount from the state and federal highways departments.

Proposals to change the laws so as to enable the counties of Wisconsin to offer more interest on road bonds are expected to come up during the road convention being held in Madison this week.

CORRECTION
In addition to the big reductions in all our prices, we are giving 5% discount on all cash purchases of dry goods, and our full line of underwear and wool blankets is selling at 1/2 off the regular price. The above is part of our regular advertisement of last night and so this correction is made.

places and many hundreds of other elective positions in state, county, and all other units of government, are and will always be filled and generally well filled, because the honor, prestige, and experience are worth a personal sacrifice for a limited period.

Leave for Commercial Field.
"I had hoped to build up a business organization of the best type in Wisconsin's highway work. As fast as we train men the best are picked for service in the commercial field. In 1920 the commission lost 27 per cent of principal employees, and indications are that the losses in 1921 will be even greater."

"As I look into the probable future, I am willing to continue to take the responsibility for the proper expenditure of the tremendous sums now available, longer than is necessary for the state highway commission and the state chief engineer to select my successor. I shall relinquish the work with the most profound regret."

Lacks Business Basis.
"If the whole public service cannot be properly organized at least the state's highway organization, must be put on a business basis. I cannot afford to be longer connected with it unless it is so put. Lacking that basis, both element of personal progress and the element of protecting my reputation as a highway engineer must impel the relinquishment of a position—both unprofitable and fraught with danger to my future career."

A SWEETHEART AT THIRTY

The Story of a Woman's Transformation
BY MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER IX
DECISION
Four o'clock Sunday found me alone in the house. Violet and James went off together with some of the girls and boys of the village, promising to meet us at Laurel at six. Right after dinner Jim came in with a bouquet of roses and a letter, and took Esther away with him.

I volunteered to clear up the dishes alone, and washed them drive off to get a letter. I smiled with satisfaction as I filled the big dishpan with hot water and began on the vast number of plates and cups. If Esther and I had only had a little of the thing before, they had only tried a little to keep up the romance of their youth—we would not all be in the curious position we were now.

Do I look all right? Esther said as she left, turning around, and I found for my inspection. "I want your room and take some of your powder, and I guess I'll need these new combs too tight. I should have worn them before. I bought 'em two years ago, but I failed to begin putting 'em on, and I hated Jim-much better."

I told she looked splendid, and she drove off happy. It was all amusing, but it was pathetic too. Perhaps she might as she said, go to the city with Vi and try the process of rejuvenation that I tried—but I knew if she did she would never succeed. Meantime, it seemed that I was being deprived of my chance to go on with my own upbuilding—that I was being chained here to the country farmhouse, too busy even to read the papers, with never a bit of leisure to cultivate either my body or my brain.

Violet would go on with at least part of another year at college—and perhaps she might marry Bud. That bothered me, and I guess it bothered her, too. She was very problematical. Vi was the type made to love one man and to care for him—not materially as Laura did—but to be the really perfect mate, and playmate.

And I—well, I had no future but what I might share with the girl—and that was being taken from me. After all, when our money was spent there was nothing to do but come home to the farm and the hard routine of work.

Of course, there was Mark—there was always Mark. I knew he loved me, and I didn't want him. But what a fate—to be his wife and housekeeper! Every time I thought of him, I thought of Bud's employer—a man who would be in every way so far from being even a playmate as I was now. I would never even remember me—but so charming and gracious.

Mark came, and we sat out on the porch. For an hour we talked, while the hot day cooled off and the shadows began to lengthen.

"Do you know," I said when I saw you over to the High School dance that I never would have known you, Enid," he said once. "And I wouldn't have known you if you hadn't been so good-looking and so kind and so sort of soft and like you didn't care much about anything. Gosh, I was surprised. I thought it must have been 50 years, not 15, since you were the pretty girl I was in love with."

I knew it had to come, so I sat quietly and let him talk.

"But I always liked you, and even last year—when you did look pretty old and homely, if you don't mind my saying so. Now all of a sudden you're so young and so beautiful, and last year I asked you to marry me. Don't you remember? I wasn't so much myself, I guess. I'm 40 and look it, and you're 30 and look it. I thought you were always going along so well in the old days and I guessed you'd get along pretty well now."

He pulled out a huge handkerchief and wiped away his hot face. "Any way, you wouldn't do it," he said. "You had a lot of romantic notions I thought were crazy in a

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR TESSIE:
I'll begin this letter with a bit of cheerful news, because as the Romans used to say, "Tickekum tickelorum," or in other words, "Spread the old cheer, for tomorrow we may die." This is the news. I saw two women on the street today both heavier than you. Not that it's anything unusual to see a woman with a bigger displacement than yours, Tessie, but to come across two in one day is what you might call hitting the high spots, and I thought it might cheer you up to know that such things can be.

Which reminds me, I've thought of a good logical way for you to reduce. Inasmuch as the trade generally is buying any kind of canned soup in preference to the Daisy variety these days, and seeing that you share the almost universal distrust of Daisy Canned Soups, not that I blame you, why the least you can do is to lay off all other varieties of canned soups and thus at the same time discourage my competitors and stem the rising tide of avoidupism. I'm a great believer in cooperation, especially among married people.

I forgot to warn you not to get the baby carriage insured, especially seeing that it's your cousin Grace's husband who's getting you on for his own profit. I wouldn't have dealings with any husband of your cousin Grace's, no matter what business he was in, even if it was the legitimate liquor business. Which reminds me—I'm sending you a duplicate key so you can take a peep at my private stock on an average of once a week just to be sure it's still there, in which case I wish you'd just add a postscript to your letter that day saying, "Safe and sound." Be sure not to make it any more definite than that, because you can't trust the mails or anything these days and besides somebody is always liable to be looking over your shoulder when you write a letter.

Love to self and child.

JOE.

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

Dr. Alice Goetz of Santa Barbara, Calif., has the unique position of being a "hygiene specialist." She is working under the social hygiene bureau of the California state board of health. Her duties mean for the most part lecturing to mothers and women on the proper training and instruction to their children in regard to the preservation of their health, addressing the men and women in all individual plans, day camps, settlement houses and boarding clubs in regard to "right living" and organizing hygiene classes in women's clubs throughout the state.

Dr. Goetz is unique in that she is the only woman on the Pacific coast who is giving these vital talks for the good of the rising generation. She makes the place in the beginning of her work and that new developments will grow out of her job which will broaden its scope. She thinks other states should adopt the same method of hygiene education.

First on the list is a poll parrot who needs care when his mistress goes south."

"Then there are several debutantes who are chaperones. Strange to say, every one thinks this is the most pleasant of jobs, but I know of a girl who has played as a chaperone who telephoned the other day and said she was having the time of her life taking 'bebbies' to week-end parties."

"One of our best jobs is assistant to a physician. Another is club work in a settlement house. There are three mothers who pay well to have their children taken to a chaperone during the afternoon. HATS WITH PETAL BRIMS FOR WEAR WITH NEW SKIRTS WITH PETAL HEMS

By ELOISE
There is a "twelve seasons a year" campaign being launched in the millinery trade, which means hats for every month. Since the four-season idea was carried out successfully in 1920 the milliners have decided that there should be a hat for every month. Consequently the fashionable woman of tomorrow will have her hat bill every month just as she has her telephone or her gas bill. A new hat every 30 days, just think of it! There will still be a great majority of women, however, who will live up to that old joke of "a hat for every month—but the same hat."

In case you are thinking of getting a new hat this month, next or the one after that this model is recommended. The prevalence of the petal hems on the new frocks for spring may have had something to do with the new hats with petal brims, but whatever the cause the effect is very charming, as is proved by this dainty chapeau. It is a late spring model made of blue straw braid. Its only trimming is a bit of floss embroidery on the crown and streamers of narrow silk ribbon which fall over the shoulder. Simplicity and youthfulness form its main attraction.

Heart and Home Problems

BY EDITHAUB THOMPSON.
Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman of 25 and my husband is very cruel to me. He doesn't want me to go anywhere, not even with my own mother. He says that a man loves his wife when he is cruel to her.

She has been that way for eight years and I have lost all my love for him. I haven't given him any cause to be that way.

I met a single boy about 23 a few months ago. He said he loved me better than any one in the world and wants me to get a divorce. He says he will treat me better than my husband. Do you think he would?

Would I be doing the right thing to get a divorce and marry this young man, or should I stay with my husband? I have one child.

HEART-BROKEN
No one would not do the right thing to divorce your husband and marry the other man. In the first place, I do not believe the other man would be true to you. A man who is willing to break up a family has an immoral nature.

For the sake of your child, try to adjust yourself to your husband's nature. Doubtless there are many ways in which you can get along with him. Try to be tactful. If you find out that he is too cruel to live with, and if he is unkind to the child, you will have a just reason to get a divorce. But to leave him in order to marry another man would be wrong. A man may be cruel to a woman and at the same time love her in his own selfish way.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 18 and am very much in love with a boy of 17. I want to tell him almost three months and I got angry at him for some reason or other and I am now going with another girl.

It is hard to part with one you love and it nearly breaks my heart to know how hard I have tried to

U. S. WOMAN UPSETS TRADITION, SITS IN POSTAL CONGRESS

Miss Elizabeth Lee Woods.

Americans in Mexico are proud of the fact that Miss Elizabeth Lee Woods of Tampa sat in the Universal Postal Congress, which has been holding its seventh session at Madrid, Spain. She is the only woman so honored. Although a resident of Mexico, she was appointed a delegate without vote, in charge of Spanish-American affairs, by the United States government. She encountered some difficulties in obtaining permission to sit in the congress. In the final granting of the permission all traditions of the body were upset.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

A Custom to Be Discouraged
Dear Miss Page: Is it proper for a woman to wear a long coat, slippers, etc.—Two Girls.

Only if you know them well. Girls, if you don't know them well, why? Well, because where you go alone you can return from alone, you know, and if the young men wish your company home they should be glad to take you. The boys who "sug" to parties, expecting to pick up a girl to take home, are either not the kind of boys a girl should go about with, or else they are and they are all right. Friends to think that such behavior is all right.

It is much easier to happen around to an affair with a bunch of boys and then if there happens to be a girl there that appeals to him, to saunter home with her—but it isn't courteous. Don't let your boy friends get into such habits, Girls.

Thank You's Very Useful
Dear Miss Page: When I am introduced to anyone I always say "I'm pleased to meet you." Then on leaving, that person is always sure to say "I'm pleased to have you." Now what should I say—"The pleasure is all mine, or yours?" And when should you use a sentence like that?—Lillian.

When a person says they are pleased to meet you, all that is necessary for you to say is "thank you" with a smile, if the person is a man; if it is another girl, you may say "I'm pleased to meet you, too," or "I hope we will meet again." The phrase "The pleasure is all mine" is rarely used nowadays.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Page in care of the "What Shall I Do?" department will be answered in these columns. In order to insure a prompt and complete answer, please send a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the questions. The Editor.

POTATO DISHES

Potato Soup.—Three or four large potatoes—one or two onions, according to taste; tablespoon of fat or substitute; croutons; celery or carrots may be added; salt, pepper, chopped parsley.

Parsa potatoes very thin and cover with boiling salted water. Heat the chopped onion in the fat, stirring so it remains white, add one tablespoon of flour, cook two minutes. Pour part of the potato water into the onion and flour, stirring all the time. Return to kettle and cook few minutes. (Add chopped parsley just before serving.)

TESTED RECIPES

Sugar Pie (Southern Style).—Three cups light-brown sugar, one-half cup melted butter, one-half cup cream, three eggs. Mix ingredients, beating thoroughly. Pour into a hot pan and bake in pastry without a top crust. Use low gas flame.

Oysters in Birds' Nests.—Boil one package of spaghetti in boiling salted water until very tender. Drain and arrange in eight small mounds on the bread board; before it is thoroughly cold scoop up the center of each and when cold fry in smoking hot fat.

The irregular form of the spaghetti results in very realistic nests. Set them in ramekins.

Prepare the oysters by scalding them in their own liquor, then drain and place one tablespoonful of butter or substitute in small pan, add a very finely chopped onion and a half carrot minced. Stir until butter is absorbed. Pour in one cupful of cream

Janesville Admitted to Wisconsin Bowling Association

MEANS BIG BOOST TO BOWLING HERE.
MEET TO MADISON

Milwaukee, Feb. 1.—Leaders in the state bowling tournament today voted to admit Janesville to the Wisconsin Bowling Association.

Doubles: H. Hoche, J. Ross, Milwaukee 1,200; H. Hoche, J. Miller, West Allis 1,194; H. Hoche, J. Buckens, Hartford 1,188; H. Hoche, J. Miller, Two Rivers 1,176; F. Janke, M. Smith, Milwaukee 1,159; Belluch, Sheets, Waukesha 1,159.

Singles: H. Goffredson, Green Bay 681; R. Pickford, Milwaukee 674; K. Koch, Madison 639; H. Chisfield, West Allis 634.

Bowling in this city took a big upward jump Monday night, when the Wisconsin Bowling Association met at Milwaukee while the state bowling meet is being held. The Janesville Bowling Association, presented this city's claims in such fashion that he was able to put entrance across.

The same meeting decided to stage the 1922 state bowling tournament at Madison. The capital city, in bidding for the meet, gained its point by stressing that a "tournament" was the name of the game in Southwestern Wisconsin. Green Bay made a fight for the meet.

Little Bit of History

Entrance of this city into the ranks of the state organization follows two years of strenuous work. In 1919, the Janesville Bowling Association was formed. Two leagues were put across that year under the jurisdiction. When the 1920 season rolled around, close to 200 members were procured under a set of officers. The outlook was brighter than ever with chances for five to six leagues when the national business depression hit the prospects a staggering blow and cut the number to two leagues.

Bowling Will Grow

Through the association, 25 bowlers are being sent to the state tournament next Saturday and Sunday in a special coach. Other teams are hitting Rockford and Watertown. Affiliated with the state body, Janesville, according to local bowlers, will go still higher in the game. There is some talk here now that the number of alleys in the city—11 all told—is too small.

BRINGING UP FATHER

MICHIGAN PLANNING BOWL SEATING 100,000

Ann Arbor.—Construction of a bowl with seating capacity of between 65,000 and 100,000 persons, to replace the concrete stands on Perry field, is contemplated by the Michigan Board of Control at the University of Michigan.

Because of the enormous attendance at conference football games during the 1920 season, the original plan for a 17-board decided the stadium, designed to seat 48,000 persons, would be inadequate to care for the growth in attendance expected during the next few years. It had been previously announced work on the stadium was to be started soon, and that the plant would be ready for the 1921 football season.

Temporary additions to the present stands probably will be built at Perry field this year, it was said. Funds for a bowl of the size described are not available at present, but members of the board believe construction on the new project will be started within a year or two.

Aurora, Ill.—Pat Moore, Memphis bantam, and Jimmy Kelly, of Chicago, boxed ten brilliant rounds here last night. Moore had a shade the better of the bout, in the opinion of sport writers.

WHICH OF THE NEW MANAGERS WILL SUCCEED, WHICH FAIL?

Seven major league clubs will be led by new pilots when the old Johnnies bid adieu next April. Four will be seen in the American and three in the National. And fans have plenty of food for discussion in trying to dope out which ones will deliver and which ones will be asked to vacate after failing to come through. Cobb's advent is the most interesting change.

Here and There, but Mostly Here

By FRANK SINCLAIR, Sporting Editor.

Just at the time when the Elks lodge of this city is seeking to gratify local fight fans by getting set to introduce the sport into Janesville, steps are being taken by certain state legislators to change the boxing law so as to permit 15 round matches in Wisconsin. While on the face of it some may think that this will give longer fights and more leeway, study of the proposition brings close to mind the fact that such a change will more than likely upset the whole frame of the boxing outlook in the state. This is more true when it is considered that the proposed statute would also make changes in the number of men in the boxing commission.

The solons of this state had better let the matter alone unless they want to muddle affairs. Wisconsin is known throughout the country as having a model fluid law. In truth, it was this state that paved the way for taking boxing out of the brutal and vulgar stage and placing it on a level with the best of sports. Other states copied their boxing legislation after that of Wisconsin.
